Developed with...Hissing seems to be the most predominant natural defense mechanism of newborns. The hissing is initiated by the pain from the stretching of the vocal cords (vocal cord constriction) due to the recent birth. Because a healthy newborn baby might cry out in the face of pain, and then, the parents feel satisfied. If the baby cries out due to the pain even after several minutes, several times, they will be very happy. This type of cry is generally heard from a newborn within a few seconds to a few minutes. This type of cry is not a voice that can be understood by the parents and sometimes, he makes a noise that can be heard through the ceiling. It can be a sound like a train or a rattle train. If we have a baby, we cannot avoid this sound at the time of delivery. This happens when the baby passes through the birth canal and is not well prepared to make the first cry in the outside. This newborn cries at the slightest touch of the air inside the nasal canal, therefore, such a sound is often heard during the night and the parents cannot sleep. If this sound is heard when the baby is asleep, it is very very scary. They think of the fact that they did not prepare the environment in which the baby was born. In addition, the fear of being unable to let them sleep due to the fear of the noise, and even be sick in the baby. Although this sound is a common cry that is heard for the first time in the first month of the baby's life, but there are differences in the other cries that are heard during the second and third month of the baby's life. The cry that is heard in the first month of life that is heard during the second and third months of the baby's life is known as "wet" which means the baby's mother's milk is not yet ready to give. They are not able to hold the baby, their feeding is not very frequent, and they are unable to feed well without falling asleep. If the mother does not take care of the baby on time, the baby might easily fall asleep and die because the baby is in a situation in which the air inside the nasal canal is not prepared to provide the right environment to the baby and then, the baby's lung volume is not sufficient to breathe properly. However, in this situation, if the baby cries out, this is not heard because the mother did not pay
