Follow the.Addition of human recombinant erythropoietin to marrow transplant recipients with hemoglobinopathies. Anemia is common in patients with hemoglobinopathies who undergo marrow transplantation. The available data show that there is a wide variety of responses to recombinant human erythropoietin (rHuEPO) therapy in patients with sickle cell anemia. Similar data are not available for those with thalassemia. We administered rHuEPO to patients with thalassemia or sickle cell anemia after hematopoietic-stem-cell transplantation and assessed the effect of rHuEPO therapy on hematologic parameters. The response to rHuEPO varied between patients
